

Applications for listening therapy

. . . among children with delayed development

- delayed speech, motor and psychological development
- also for premature babies school and learning difficulties

- weakness in reading and writing
- dyslexia
- dyscalculia
- problems with concentration, easily distracted
- problems with language and speech behavioural problems

- emotional withdrawal, anxieties
- lack of self-confidence
- restlessness, hyperactivity (ADHS)
- attention deficit syndrome (ADS)
- aggressiveness
- low frustration tolerance
- lack of motivation disorders in the vestibular region

- balance
- coordination
- body image
- gross and fine motor skills

- attitude

problems of integration

- following adoption, divorce, etc.

autism

- autistic traits

organic/genetic disabilities

- especially Down's Syndrome

- brain damage

Foreign language integration

. . . among adults

auditive perception and communication problems psychosomatic problems

- sleep disorders, tenseness of the spinal column, etc.

problems with balance

- e.g. Crohn's disease stimulation at times of exhaustion/burnout syndrome rehabilitation

- after sudden hearing loss

- tinnitus

- stroke